Through SIP, students gain insights into corporate operations, decision-making processes, market dynamics, and business challenges, enhancing their analytical and problem-solving skills.During the internship, students undertake industry-specific projects, interact with professionals, and work on real-time business issues. The Project Viva serves as an evaluation process where students present their internship experiences, research findings, and key learnings, demonstrating their ability to analyze and provide strategic recommendations for business improvement.

Course Outcomes (COs)

REPORT

TOPIC: IFS (Integrated Farming System) model visit

Date of Visit: 9/11/2022

Location: Chhota Gogra Village, Jamshedpur

Outcome of Visit:

Introduction:

On 9/11/2025, the B.Sc. Agriculture students visited an Integrated Farming System (IFS) model at Chhota Gogra Village,Jamshedpur as part of their academic curriculum. The objective of the visit was to understand the concept of integrated farming, its components, and its role in enhancing agricultural sustainability, productivity, and income diversification.

IFS MODEL ??

Integrated Farming System (IFS) Model

The Integrated Farming System (IFS) is a sustainable agricultural practice that combines various farming components like crops, livestock, fisheries, agroforestry, and poultry into a single cohesive unit. This model aims to optimize resource utilization, enhance productivity, improve economic viability, and maintain ecological balance.

Key Features of IFS Model:

- 1. Diversification: Combining crop production with livestock, poultry, fishery, beekeeping, and agroforestry to minimize risks and enhance income.
- 2. Resource Recycling: Efficient use of farm residues and by-products. For example, animal manure is used as fertilizer, while crop residues can be used as animal feed.
- 3. Sustainability: Enhances soil fertility, reduces dependency on external inputs, and promotes organic farming.
- 4. Income & Employment Generation: Ensures year-round income and employment for small and marginal farmers.
- 5. Resilience: Increases the resilience of the farming system against climate change and market fluctuations.
- 6. Nutritional Security: Provides diversified food products, improving household nutrition.

Components of IFS Model:

- 1. Crop Production: Primary activity involving cereals, pulses, vegetables, fruits, etc.
- 2. Livestock Rearing: Dairy farming, poultry, goat farming, piggery, etc.
- 3. Fisheries: Aquaculture and integrated fish farming systems.
- 4. Agroforestry: Growing trees along with crops for additional income and soil conservation.
- 5. Apiculture: Beekeeping for honey production and pollination.
- 6. Mushroom Cultivation: Utilizing crop residues for growing mushrooms.

Department of Agriculture Netaji Subhas University

7. Biogas Production: Using animal waste for energy generation.

Benefits of IFS Model:

- Enhanced resource-use efficiency.
- Improved farm profitability and sustainability.
- Effective waste management through recycling.
- Reduced risk of crop failure by diversification.
- Increased employment opportunities.

Objectives of the Visit: The primary goals of the visit were:

- To learn about the different components of the IFS model.
- To understand the interdependence of various farming practices.
- To analyze the economic and environmental benefits of integrated farming.
- To explore opportunities for small and marginal farmers to maximize income and resource use efficiency.

Observations: During the visit, students were guided by farm experts and practitioners who explained the different components of the IFS model. Key highlights of the visit included:

- 1. Crop-Livestock Integration: The farm demonstrated how crop residues are used as feed for livestock, and in return, animal waste is utilized as organic manure, reducing dependence on chemical fertilizers.
- 2. Agroforestry and Horticulture: The inclusion of fruit trees, timber trees, and vegetable cultivation helped in enhancing biodiversity and providing additional income sources.
- 3. Aquaculture and Poultry Farming: The integration of fish farming with poultry and duck rearing showed how these components complement each other in resource utilization and income generation.
- 4. Composting and Vermiculture: Organic waste from different farming components was efficiently recycled into compost and vermicompost, promoting sustainable soil health management.

Department of Agriculture Notaji Subhas U....ersity 5. Water Management: Efficient irrigation systems such as drip irrigation, rainwater harvesting, and pond-based farming were observed, showcasing sustainable water usage in integrated farming.

Learning Outcomes:

- 1. Understanding of Integrated Farming Principles:
  - Gaining knowledge about the fundamental principles of combining various agricultural enterprises (crops, livestock, fishery, poultry, agroforestry) into a unified system.
- 2. Resource Recycling Techniques:
  - Learning how by-products from one enterprise can be utilized as inputs for another (e.g., using animal manure for crop fertilization, crop residues for livestock feed).
- 3. Sustainable Farming Practices:
  - Observing eco-friendly practices that enhance soil health, reduce chemical use, and promote biodiversity.
- 4. Efficient Land Use Management:
  - Understanding how to optimize available land for multiple enterprises, improving productivity per unit area.
- 5. Economic Viability and Profit Maximization:
  - Studying how diversified income sources reduce financial risks and improve profitability.
- 6. Pest and Disease Management:
  - Learning integrated pest and disease control methods that are effective and environmentally sustainable.
- 7. Nutrient Management:
  - Understanding the use of organic manure, composting, and efficient nutrient recycling methods.

Department of Agriculture Netaji Subhas University

- 8. Water Management Techniques:
  - Observing efficient water-use practices such as rainwater harvesting, drip irrigation, and integrated aquaculture systems.
- 9. Climate Resilience:
  - Learning how integrated systems can provide stability against climate change impacts by diversifying farm activities.
- 10. Practical Exposure to Modern Technologies:
  - Observing technologies like biogas plants, vermicomposting units, and automated irrigation systems.
- 11. Skill Development:
  - Acquiring practical skills in setting up and managing different components of an IFS model.

12. Networking and Knowledge Sharing:

• Interacting with experts and experienced farmers to gain insights into realworld challenges and solutions.

Conclusion The visit to the IFS model was an insightful and practical learning experience for the students. It provided an understanding of sustainable agricultural practices and their economic and environmental benefits. The integration of different farm components demonstrated how farmers could achieve self-sufficiency, reduce input costs, and enhance productivity.

Recommendations

- Encouraging farmers to adopt the IFS model for better sustainability and profitability.
- Conducting workshops and training sessions on integrated farming techniques.
- Organizing similar field visits for practical exposure to diversified farming systems.

The visit successfully bridged the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical implementation, inspiring students to explore innovative and sustainable farming practices.
